

University Presbyterian Church Library

The library seeks to fulfill the mission statement of University Presbyterian Church.

Empowered by God's Spirit, we will follow Jesus Christ as disciples and apostles who are equipped and sent to re-present God's reign in the world through worship, service, and community.

To help equip the membership as disciples and apostles, the Adult Library seeks to support the following objectives:

- The encouragement of spiritual formation
- The support of church programs and Bible study
- The ongoing development of informed and intelligent laity of the Church
- The acquaintance with historical backgrounds and beliefs in Protestantism, in Presbyterianism, and in University Presbyterian Church
- The wholesome use of leisure time and retirement years for the enrichment of personal lives and of Christian service
- The desire to enter into Christian ministries and missions in the community, nation, and the world
- The encouragement of Christian care giving not only within marriage and family, but also within the congregation and the community
- The quest to develop a deeper understanding of one's role as a Christian in the community and in the world
- A more profound prayer life
- A philosophical understanding which enables a rational basis of Christian faith.

How to check out a book:

- Each book in the library has a library card for you to sign and date upon check out. Leave the card in the basket on the desk.
- To return the book, just leave it on the desk and the librarian will replace the card and reshelv the book.

When do I check out a book and how long can I keep it?

- You may check out a book anytime the library is open (during regular church office times and on Sundays). You may keep the book as long as you would like.

See the policy on donations for guidelines for donating items/books to the UPC library.
